Care & Maintenance:

1. The board used in our outdoor kitchens feature a resistance to staining and are easy to maintain using a clean damp microfibre cloth with warm soapy water. Do not use strong solvents to remove any residue.
2. All hardware used has a high level of corrosive resistance, however it can show some signs of corrosion. To preserve the shine and appearance of your stainless steel, regular care and maintenance are essentials. Rinse with clean fresh water and dry thoroughly. Remove ordinary stains with mild soap and warm water. More stubborn stains can be removed with commercial grade cleaners suitable for use on stainless steel.
3. Regular cleaning and maintaining of any appliances.
4. Do not place any hot pots directly on the benchtop
5. Never cut directly on the bench top as you might risk scratching it.
6. Try and clean spills immediately where possible. For cleaning use a standard dish detergent nothing too aggressive or bleach based.
7. Long-term maintenance could include resealing the benchtop to maintain the appearance of the bench top.

Installation guide:

1. The outdoor kitchens must be positioned in an opaque covered outdoor area with a minimum of 1500 mm
2. Overhang on all sides (based on a 2500 mm high ceiling or roof).
3. If the ceiling is higher than 2500 mm the overhang should be increased accordingly.
4. We recommend the kitchen to be positioned in a fully shaded area and should not be exposed to direct sunlight where the temperature of the panels could exceed 70 Celsius.
5. Like any material exposed to the weather colour fading can happen.
6. The panels are combustible and therefore gas cooktops or BBQ's must have the required clearances in accordance with the appliance manufacturer's installation requirements and meet NZ gas installation code and any other relevant codes

Note: If ceiling height is more than 2500mm, then the covered overhang should be increased accordingly.
